“A modest increase in construction costs over the last few months is driven by labor and material cost increases. Market optimism also contributes to the moderate increase in costs. However, any significant change in the market will require a change in the overall economy.”

Karl F. Almstead
Vice President

The Turner Building Cost Index is determined by the following factors considered on a nationwide basis: labor rates and productivity, material prices and the competitive condition of the marketplace.